WAYNE COUNTY RETURNS FROM THE MICHIGAN TERRITORIAL CENSUS OF 1827

Copied from the original records by Mrs. Edgar M. Montgomery and Mrs. Raymond Millbrook

In 1827 Wayne County, Michigan, occupying the same area which it has today, was subdivided into the City of Detroit and into eight townships whose limits are indicated in the map below. A territorial census taken that same year counted all the county's population into five categories: heads of families listed by name, white males under 21 years, white males over 21 years, white females, and colored persons, the last four classes indicated by number only. Returns for the City of Detroit were published as a special folding chart, next to page 461, in Vol. XII, 1887, of the Michigan Pioneer and Historical Collections.

which followed a Mr. Potter received a blow upon the head, which resulted fatally. The tavern was destroyed, however, and was never rebuilt.

When the arsenal was abandoned, one of the buildings was acquired by the village authorities and remodeled for a town hall. The others passed into the possession of individuals. The Michigan Central Railroad was completed through the village in 1837, and the first car on the Detroit, Ypsilanti and Ann Arbor electric line (now a part of the Detroit United Railways) was run on June 12, 1898.

Dearborn has been twice incorporated, the first charter being surrendered soon after it was granted. The second incorporation dates from 1894, the first president under the charter having been William H. Clark. Clyde M. Ford is the present mayor of Dearborn.

The City of Dearborn is now growing more rapidly than most any city in America. It is a residential suburb of Detroit, and is the terminus of the Ford air service. The city is the home of Henry Ford, who was born on a farm nearby. Mr. Ford has restored the farm to its earliest appearance; and has also erected here his famous museum village, consisting of old buildings collected from all parts of the United States and England.

DELRAY

The Village of Delray, first known as Belgrade, situated in Springwells Township, on the Detroit and Rouge rivers, was settled about the beginning of the Nineteenth Century. In 1850 the Detroit and Lake Superior Copper Works were established near Fort Wayne at the upper end of the village; the Detroit Steel and Spring Works and the Michigan Car Company began business in the '70s and the Michigan Carbon Company, located near the River Rouge, a little later. In September, 1889, the Detroit International Fair and Exposition was opened on the grounds now occupied by the Solvay Process Company. The Michigan State Fair was held on these grounds in 1884.

Delray was incorporated as a village October 14, 1897, and the following officers were elected: Frederick J. Clippert, president; Dr. Hugh Cary, Peter B. DeLisle, William O. Miller, Josiah L. Riopelle, John A. Roll, and William Zimmerman, trustees; George P. Moog, clerk; Albert Frank, treasurer; Amander G. Barnes, assessor; L. M. Coulson, marshal; Charles Boston, chief of the fire department.

Several lines of railroad pass through Delray and it is connected with the business center of Detroit by two electric lines of the Detroit Street Railways. A few years ago the village was annexed to the City of Detroit and its corporate existence then came to an end.

ECORSE

Near the close of the War of 1812, a settlement was made near the mouth of the Ecorse River and a few years later it took the name of "Grand Port." In 1902 it was incorporated under the name of Ecorse.

PIONEER SCHOOLS AND THEIR PATRONS.

OF THE TOWN OF NANKIN, WAYNE COUNTY, MICHIGAN.

BY MELVIN D. OSBAND.

Read at the annual meeting, February 2d, 1881.

The writer of this paper was not only a pioneer, but the son and grandson of pioneers. My grandfather, Weaver Osband, emigrated from Rhode Island to Palmyra, N. Y., in 1791, when the country of the "Genesees" was young. There my father, William Osband, was born June 1, 1796, and from thence he emigrated to Michigan when it was beyond the outskirts of civilization.

In the spring of 1825, Rev. Marcus Swift, whose wife was sister of my father, and Mr. Luther Reeves, a brother of my mother, two citizens of Palmyra, N. Y., came to Michigan to purchase land for their future home. Landing at Detroit, they penetrated the forests by the aid of the Indian trail, up the banks of the west branch of the River Rouge, to what is now the town of Nankin, being T. 2 S., R. 9 E. Mr. Reeves located 160 acres on section 3, and Mr. Swift located an equal tract on section 11. Returning to Detroit they purchased their lands May 10, 1825. In the following August, William Osband purchased of Mr. Reeves his Michigan land, and on the morning of Saturday, October 1, 1825, he and Mr. Swift, with their families, started for the far off Michigan by the Erie Canal. The Erie Canal was not yet completed, and at Lockport they were compelled to transport their goods seven miles by land and re-ship. They landed at Detroit on the 8th of the month, having consumed one week on the passage.

Mr. Swift's family consisted of himself, wife, three sons, and one daughter. Mr. Osband's consisted of himself, wife, two sons, Luman Fowler, a young man in my father's employ, and Amy Burgess, a young girl then a member of the family. The writer of this was then but one and one-half years old. The transit from Detroit to their land was made in a small boat down the Detroit River, and up the River Rouge to the Thomas settlement, about ten miles from Detroit, and from thence by a wagon drawn by three Indian ponies owned by Mr. Alanson Thomas. The little colony found accommodations with a Mr. Benj. Williams, in what is now the town of Dearborn, on section 6, till they could build on their land.

The town of Nankin was originally covered, with slight exceptions, with dense forests of large growth. Two branches of the River Rouge traverse the town from west to east about four miles apart. They run in narrow valleys less than twenty feet below the surrounding country.

Michigan Land Records

Michigan is a federal-land state. Lands were generally bought from the government or from other individuals. Some early settlers in Michigan also received land under the French government.

The patent index is found on Ancestry.com. Microfilm copies for most federal land patents are available on microfilm at the Library of Michigan. Transactions between individuals are available from the local county Register of Deeds.

The Bureau of Land Management website provides live access to Federal land conveyance records for the Public Land States. They also have image access to more than 2 million Federal land title records for Eastern Public Land States issued between 1820 -1908. Images of Serial patents (land titles issued between 1908 and the mid-1960's) have been added to the website: www.glorecords.glm.gov

When searching on the Bureau of Land Management website, wildcards can be very useful. The two most common are the percent (%) and underscore (_).

Use the % symbol when searching to replace any number of letters or no letters. When searching the surname Newman (or various spellings (Newmann, Neuman, Neumann), the search N%m%n would generate all the various possibilities.

Use the _ symbol to replace one character. To search for Kile or Kyle, enter K_le. This would return any four letter names starting with K and ending with le.

① When Indiana became a state in 1816, the Illinois Territory was created and the Michigan Territory was slightly expanded.

② When Illinois became a state in 1818, the Michigan Territory was expanded to include the present-day state of Wisconsin.

③ By the 1830s the Michigan Territory stretched from the Detroit River to the Missouri River.

④ When Michigan became a state in 1837, the Wisconsin Territory was created. Wisconsin became a state in 1848.

The word Michigan is a Native American word generally interpreted to mean "great water". In 1784, Thomas Jefferson proposed a law that divided up the sparsely occupied American lands between the Appalachian Mountains and the Mississippi River. One of these future states was to be called Michigania. This state was to be located in what is present-day Wisconsin. This bill was never adopted. When the Michigan Territory was created, it seemed logical to name it after Lake Michigan. The Michigan Territory existed for 32 years. In 1835, Michigan prepared to become a state. It took two years before President Andrew Jackson signed a bill creating the State of Michigan.

Meeting Summary

At our January meeting, Bob and Candace Myers discussed exploring the history of houses. Bob is the Curator of the Berrien County Historical Association. He and Candace have researched the history of several houses in St. Joseph, starting with their own. Several tips were given for learning the history and age of houses.

To help you determine when a house was built and the original owner:

- Review the architectural style or elements (features) of the house. These can help establish a construction time period.
- Check plat maps for property owner names.
- Using the legal property description, use Tax Rolls. Check with the local municipality for their hours and location. A jump in property evaluation price may mean a house was built. Sometimes an evaluation increase is an across the board property value adjustment.
- Check the local library for Sanborn Fire Maps. These maps were created by the Sanborn Fire Company to assess fire risk. They will show any structures that existed. These maps exist mostly for downtown areas.
- Newspapers sometimes listed small notices of new house construction or the family moving into their new house.
- City directories could show occupants at the address.
- Probate files may also list helpful information.

Sometimes an exact date cannot be determined especially for rural houses. In that case a circa date (appx. date) may be the best that can be determined. You will also want to be careful when determining the age of a house. Sometimes fires or other disasters required a house to be rebuilt.
